Microneedling

Microneedling, sometimes referred to as collagen induction therapy, is a minimally invasive skin treatment that uses fine, sterile needles to create controlled micro-injuries within the skin's surface. These tiny punctures stimulate the skin's natural healing response, encouraging the production of collagen and elastin - two proteins essential for maintaining firm, healthy-looking skin. It improves skin quality gradually and naturally.

Common concerns treated with microneedling include:

- Fine lines and early wrinkles
- Acne scarring
- Enlarged pores
- Uneven skin texture
- Mild pigmentation issues
- Sun damage
- Stretch marks
- General skin dullness or loss of firmness

We also recommend microneedling for preventative skin maintenance and collagen support as part of a healthy ageing strategy. The microneedling device allows precise control over needle depth depending on the area being treated and the skin concern being addressed.
